

Australian Muslim Women's Centre for Human Rights
Equality without Exception

The Board of the Australian Muslim Women's Centre for Human Rights are delighted to be welcoming Nesreen Bottriell as the new Chief Executive Officer. We are confident that with her professional experience, connection to communities and established stakeholder relationships, the organisation will continue to grow and deliver high impact work for Muslim women in Australia.

Nesreen is an accomplished business leader, with experience in not-for-profit strategic leadership and management and holds qualifications in International and Community Development, Business Administration and Finance. She is passionate about amplifying the voices of marginalised communities and advocating for social justice.

Nesreen has provided exceptional strategic leadership to the organisation over the past six years, leading its growth, championing advocacy efforts, and strengthening impact. Her outstanding management and expertise will be invaluable in guiding the organisation through its next chapter.

The Australian Muslim Women's Centre for Human Rights has a skilled and dedicated team who will continue to work alongside Nesreen to provide exceptional services to achieve the organisations goals.

The Board is looking forward to working with Nesreen to deliver on our strategic plan and continue to advocate for the rights of Muslim women to achieve equality without exception.

Sincerely,

Sahar Zaidi
Board Chair
